KNOCKED DOWN AND ROBBED

Janitor of Flat Building Is Attacked by Highwayman and Relieved of $10.

J. W. Kempton, a janitor in the Oxford flats, was robbed last night after he had been knocked to the sidewalk by a blow in the head. The highwayman went through his pockets and took a $10 bill. Kempton was so badly dazed from the blow that he was unable to give a good description of the man.

The janitor was returning from town and was walking north on West Temple. He was about 100 feet from the cernor of West Temple and North Temple when a man stepped from behind a tree and hit him in the head just over his left eye. He was knocked to the ground and lay there dazed while the man went through his pockets. The robber then ran up North

Kempton believes that the man was of assessment No. 26, levied on the 8th familiar with his habits as he usually has day of June, 1907, the several amounts set
